Tendency to Spend More but Wisely, Shown by Survey-Many Improvements

To learn what has been the success of the city manager system and what it offers toward improvement of urban government, The Christian Science Monitor has sent inquiries to executives of all American cities where the plan has been tried, and has received detailed replies from more than half of them. These have been analyzed and interpreted by a staff writer in a series of articles of which the following is the second.

By TULLY A. NETTLETON There is one kind of "small town stuff" that is sweeping through the United States in a wave of popu-larity, capturing metropolitan cities as well as crossroad namiets. It is the city manager form of govern-

City-Owned Oil Wells

Real Boon to Taxpayers SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR Long Beach, Calif.

O^{IL} royalties from its city-owned leases on Signal Hill are proving a real boon to the taxpayers of Long Beach. Due to the coming in of deep wells newly drilled, the city's annual income from oil is swelling again. H. S. Callahan, city manager, declares he is arranging to take 20 per cent of the oil royalties and apply it so the city tax rate can be cut next July to about $1.30 per $100. Last July it was red ed from the old rate of $1.40 to $1.35. Present estimates on the city's oil revenue for the next fiscal year are $1,300,000,

WASHINGTON, (AP) - Revision downward of the House $290,000,000 tax reduction bill to $210,000,000 has been decided upon by the Republican majority of the Senate Finance Committee.

The $210,000,000 program was laid before the committee by Chairman Smoot on behalf of the Republicans who have a majority of 11 to 9 on the committee. The Democrats, who are urging a $300,000,000 reduction, took it under consideration and another meeting will be held Thursday, when the majority group expects to revise the bill as proposed.

G. O. P. Program

The Republican program follows: Reduction of the corporation tax from 13½ to 12½ per cent; loss in revenue, $82,000,000. Repeal of the automobile tax; loss, $66,000,000. Repeal of the estate tax; loss,

Same Standard of Ethics Would Aid Peace, Mr. Redfield Declares

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU NEW YORK-Outlawry of war as "the next step in civilization" was urged by speakers at the eighty-fifth meeting of the Economic Club of New York held here. The speakers declared that the war system must be abolished, the "will to peace" cultivated and a system of international ethics established that will place relations between nations on the same unselfish basis as is now approved among individuals.

William C. Redfield, formerly Secretary of Commerce, characterized war as the survival of the ancient rivalry and hostility that formerly that later produced the clan, and In Alabama, William G. McDowell, afterward was evident in enmity between cities. Instead of relegating to the Nation a code that has long been outworn in more intimate relations, he said, we should set up a standard of international ethics comparable to that which civilization has produced between individuals.

"We believe a man ought to be unselfish if he has means or power." he continued. "We think he ought to use them for the public good. We believe power brings responsibility and that responsibility does not end at home. We accept the doctrine that it is a man's duty to serve others in proportion as he has means so to do. Regulation of Public Utilities Discussed Before Women Voters

Enlightened Public Opinion Essential in Solving Latin-American Issues

By MARJORIE SHULER SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BURKAU

CHICAGO-"The hand that rocks the cradle" is about to take a firm grip on the public utility business of the United States, judging from the attitude of the delegates arriving here for the biennial convention of the National League of Women

With half a dozen conferences in process dealing with the legal status cial hygiene, hundreds of women chose the technical discussions before the committee on living costs where Samuel Ferguson, president of the Hartford Electric Light Company; John Bauer, director of the American Public Utilities Bureau, and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the National Conference on Valuation of Railroads, debated ways and means for regulating pub-lic utilities, a subject which it is proposed to add to the league's study program for the coming two years.

Various Types of Regulation All three speakers favored some type of regulation, but Mr. Ferguson argued that the basis of regulation "should be local conditions rather than national consistency." Mr. Bauer placed his argument in favor of regulation on the grounds that public utilities, unlike ordinary industries, have a public interest which subjects them to regulation and that. being in the nature of monopolies rather than in competition with other local businesses, it is necessary to hold them in check by legal means.

Mr. Richberg deplored the custom of retaining former public officials on the staffs of public utility corporations, declaring that it constitutes a temptation to present office holders charged with responsibilities for regulation of such businesses. Both Raymond L. Buell of the Foreign Policy Association and Dr. John H. Latane of Johns Hopkins University, criticized the United States'

policy in Latin America. Latin-American Policy Criticized Mr. Buell recommended that the United States abandon its policy of protecting the rights of Europeans as well as Americans in countries to the south, give up its present system governments" there, which he charged has led to meddling in the elections

"Padder Tennis" New Public Recreation

London DADDER tennis," described as a condensed form of lawn tennis, involving the same court markings, with each measurement halved, and the same method of scoring, will shortly be offered as a public recreation in London as the result of a recent trial game played between Col. H. G. Mayes, the Canadian Davis Cup player, and Brig.-Gen. P. Maud. head of the Parks Department. Following this test, the London County Council decided to put down four courts in Battersea Park, and they were to be opened to the public in April at a charge of twopence per head. Padder tennis, while preserving the essential qualities of lawn tennis, occupies only a quarter of the space. A padder, or bat, made of five-ply wood, replaces the hightension gut racket, and a semi-solid rubber ball is employed. The use of these implements slows down the game to compensate for the economizing of space.

Nora Bayes

Nora Bayes had that great gift, rare among public entertainers, of getting playgoers to respond audibly to her. Often persons in the audience would talk to her across the foot-lights, just as small boys in Fred Stone's audiences talk to him. The more they talk, Nora Bayes once told me, the harder she worked to please them. "Don't encourage me," I heard her say once to an audience that was in an uproar of applause; "you're getting all I have right now." Elderly English playgoers recall how the audiences used to "coo" at Nellie Farren of the Gaiety in London.

Mr. .Moore was much pleased with the cordial reception accorded by audiences and press to his little comedy. Though slight, and written at the beginning. especially, with more sense of period than of character, the play passed for us a pleasant hour in the at-mosphere of Elizabethan London. Mr. George Moore, it seems, advo-

Upon an affirmative reply, the letsponsored by our organization are designed as permanent sources of inquest Mrs. Storrow has permitted it being offered to encourage to be used on this page. The letter read, in part:

I was thrilled to hear that you will make me a visit the next time you come to New York. Then you could meet Dick and try out a sample of my food. You see, I have so much confidence in my cooking after a month of practicing what Cedar Hill taught me that I dare to ask you to try it. I don't I dare to ask you to try it. I don't know what I would have done without those ten days. I think that per-haps the things that helped the most were (1) learning how to clean most were (1) learning now to clean properly—such things as windows, ice box, and garbage pail, and how to make dustless dusters. (2) How to buy the right utensils out of the thousands they show you. (3) How to plan my work so that I can get the most possible amount done in the least time. (4) The lessons in washing have saved my trousseau from ruin, I am sure.

In the cooking, there has been only one meal that was a failure, and even at that we didn't have to go out and get a substitute. We have guests once or twice a week, and our food averages 90 cents a day of course, that doesn't count Dick's lunches.

"These information centers," con tinued Mrs. Storrow, "serve all classes. Many women come for informa-tion and help, and in almost ironic contrast to the bride with her clothing budget came one day a woman the mother of eight children, whose husband was illiterate. She learned how to cook better, and to serve better food for the money she spent for it; and how to make clothing for her children. She took a course in millinery so as to make their hats. She now is learning basketry and weaving, and her latest efforts resulted in neatly-woven school bags for the children and a hand bag for herself.

The matter of educating women for the legal profession has been argued from various angles since the first women started practicing about 50 years ago. In some cases the question of admission to men's schools was not considered even debatable, as shown by the statement of Dr. Edgar F. Smith, provost of the University of Pennsylvania, in which he said: "I can say officials that the University of Pennsylvan has been admitting women to its law school on equal terms with men since 1885. No complaint has ever come from any of the professors or from the students. I have been informed that all of the girls have done remarkably well."

The University of Chicago admits women without question to its school; and President Currell of the University of South Carolina points out that Law School becomes, so far as the great law school which still remains exclusively masculine.

Workers' Education in the United States

By ETHEL M. SMITH 2. Beginnings* and the Present

OMEN'S initiative in educational work in the United States is not a new thing. lt should not be surprising, therefore, to find that women led the way in workers' education in the United States. They began, really, in the eighteen-thirties and forties—the daughters of New England farmers who worked in the mills of Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Their successors picked up the task again after a fallow three-quarters of a century, by establishing the first labor school. Other women carried on in 1921 by founding the first summer school for workers in conjunction with the faculty of a women's academic institution. Next year residence labor school for women. The Women Workers Who Pioneered

Those women of Revolutionary stock who fought against industrial oppression in the early days of cot-ton manufacture in New England fought for the right to education. Many of them, in fact, were school teachers in the country in winter, and mill hands in the cities in sum-groups, in newer industrial develop- hundreds. There were years and decades of adjustment, and in time the little younger then Boston, has The current school year opened daughters of immigrant Irish, German, Scandinavian, English, Scottish, French, Italian and Jewish workers took up the educational task they inherited, along with the jobs the native daughters had left. This movement took form as the National Women's Trade Union League of America, founded in 1903. Its purpose was to organize women workers Dear Friends: under the ægis of the American Federation of Labor. But its leaders perceived, before long, that this was an educational job. "The want of current knowledge of their own re-sources," as the old National Trades' Union had said in 1837, continued to be "the primary cause of all the evil and difficulties with which the laboring classes are environed."

Next in the educational field came Workers' Union, in the organization of which the Women's Trade Union Leagues in different cities had played an important part. First "Unity Centers," for class work and recreation, were established in New York, and then the Workers' University, now conducted at Washington Irving High School in New York City on Saturday afternoons and Sunday

Subsequent developments in the workers' education movement were Trade Union League, recognizing the need of trained specialists to carry on the business of the trade unions, was giving specialized training to trade union girls for what was really a trade union vocational purpose. The International Ladies' Garment Workers, nearly all of whom were foreign born and most of whom were Jewish and Italian, were teaching their members a new language and the ways of the New World civilization, along with their economics. In 1920, again in Massachusetts, a new educational experiment took among the native-born workers, and the sequel to this was the chain of labor colleges which have become the prevailing type of labor educa-tional institutions throughout the United States.

Hence it was a pleasure to note the suggestion made in the column of March 27 as to the possibility of the getting together of "grown-ups" men-"married, bachelors or single," who might like to exchange thoughts or experiences with others in different parts of the world.

I am sure there can be no paper or magazine which can bring the world closer to one's door than the Monitor, for its news is assembled from all parts of the world and one no longer has to travel in order to hear of even the most remote districts. And in its columns one often reads of things and events which do not appear even in one's own

Here New England hospitality left him scarcely a moment to him self, what with teas, dinners, balls, and visits to no end of important people and places. But he manages to keep record of his experiences.

All of his impressions he assembled in the two volumes of "Travels in North America," published in London in 1787, and at the very time was shaping the structure of the new nation. And in no unworthy manner did he thus inaugurate the distinguished French interpretations of this country at successive critical epochs, down to the present moment when M. Siegfried suggests that "America Comes of Age." In completeness his observations form a unique record of conditions during the crucial years which he described. His lively and sympathetic curiosity played over the whole scene: the played over the whole scene: the appearance, the manners, and customs of all classes of people, their houses, daily toil, and amusements, their talk and their ideals. The Village House-Cleaning

The old rite of spring house-cleaning is. I am told, fallen into disuse with the new improvements in household machinery. I can but regret its passing, for it would seem to have both practical and symbolic value, allying itself with other spring observances which celebrate casting off the husks of the old . . . when earth and human beings awake together in a fresh mood of hope and of vigor. Such were the Demeter festivals in the south, in the north, those of the ancient pagan May Day, with their dances and fresh garlands; and other half-religious ceremonies which go back to the dawn of time. Here, in our quiet village, we hold to this grand spring purification, as we do to other old usages, in part spectators, in part actors therein quickened in memory. There are fingers astir in corners long untouched; there are shadowy to see, all down the street, on the green lawns, rugs being beaten, cushions shaken; windows are being washed; soap-suds are applied to the lintels of the doorways with almost sacerdotal fervor. Out on long lines hang many garments airing in carpet-beating man is in constant requisition; he knows himself the most important personage in town. unkingly air. There is great rivalry in regard to the scrub-women, who ness of their dancing predecessors, singing in the spring, at least some of their activity. The painters are all too few, but busy on every side: there are green or brown smudges on passing noses. Our suspense is deep in regard to the color of paint in buckets into which brushes are constantly being dipped, for the matter is of great moment. . . . Everywhere is stir, motion . . . it may be only the quick motion of feet escaping from the stream of warm water which trickles by mistake down the front path; pulses go more rapidly as fingers fly; whole some excitement reigns. Through it all one sees the satisfied faces of householders, as of those who have attained; and the wistful faces of domestic animals, astray in a world whose ideals are beyond their reach. It is not that we are unaware of modern devices which keep this constant cleansing of the human habi-nual or semi-annual upheaval. We are aware of them, and we use them but gingerly and with full knowledge given us a standard which we refuse

We think the quickest, cheapest and by far the most comfortable way to see the many beauty spots of Scotland, made famous by Burns and Scotl and Stevenson, is by the luxuriously appointed Motor Coaches of the S. M. T. Company.
The regular daily tours cover not only the most wonderful scenery in Scotland, but include the chief places of historical and literary interest.
For tourists whose time is limited, an itinerary has been arranged, covering in two days the principal places of historic, romantic and scenic interest.
For further particulars apply at the principal Tourist Agencies.

TRADE EXPANSION OF MEXICO SHOWN

Figures Indicate 1927 Slump Is Temporary Halt

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

MEXICO CITY—As an indication that the 1927 slump in Mexico's foreign trade is only a temporary halt in the steady expanse of Mexican world commerce the American Chamber of Commerce in this city has published official figures showing the remarkable gains in exports and imports

The Hotel has acquired the adjoining Property known as The Old County Club House

The Old County Club House MEXICO CITY-As an indication since the beginning of the century, and particularly since 1921. In all, Mexico's imports for the period between the period 1921-26 showed a gain of approximately 220 per cent over the period between 1901-05. The average annual value of importations during the 1921-26 period was $183,378.000. Exports showed a greater gain for the period than the imports, an increase of approximately 350 per cent. The average annual value between 1921-26 was $318,994,000. The 1926 figure was $333,739,000.

Some idea of the value of the trade between the United States and Mexico during recent years is shown by the statistical chart, offered by the Chamber of Commerce. Imports from the United States for 1924 were $135,075,000; 1925, $144,720,323; 1926, $134,994,164, but owing to unfavorable economic conditions the past year, the 1927 figure dropped to $109,-151,009. Mexican exports to the United States for the same period were, 1924, $167.087,000; 1925, $178,-835,879; 1926, $169.368,775; 1927, $141,462,453.

DANGER TO BUSINESS IN INCREASED STOCK

tivity, like that of recent weeks, carries a threat to business in that a reaction from extreme speculative entusiasm might have the effect of impairing general confidence. This is the view of the Union Trust Company. Cleveland, in its current magazine, Trade Winds.

The danger is particularly present if "the public" who are speculating in stocks represent the rank and file of the business and professional men of the country, the bank believes, "Actual business conditions do not appear to bear out stock market prognostications as far as average or general prosperity is concerned," the bank continues, "The prospect of increasingly good business is based at "Actual business conditions do not

STOCK EXCHANGE'S NEW SYSTEM

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT

SAN FRANCISCO—New office machinery has been installed by the clearing house of the San Francisco Stock Exchange which, the exchange announces, will make possible unusually efficient and detailed service to clients. Under the new system, tabulating cards are made by a punch device, giving the name of purchasing and selling members, number of shares, price, and an extension of the market value of transactions. These cards are rutiomatically sorted to give trial balances, and can then be tabulated for balance sheets for each broker.

Fine Goods in Mixed Market

In the fine goods section the situation was decidedly mixed. Voiles are made mostly by those mills outside of the strike influence and therefore were unchanged in price or demand. This was also true of the combed broadcloth. COTTON PRICES ARE BARELY STEADY

NEW YORK, April 24 (A)-The cotton market opened easy today at a de-cline of 7 to 10 points, active months soon showing net losses of 10 to 12 points under liquidation and selling, evidently inspired by the outlook for prospects due to recent storms.

STATISTICS SHOW COPPER INDUSTRY'S SOUND POSITION

The statistical position of copper is sound. Production is being controlled to the point where it is meeting the consuming demand.

not being accumulated. Of course in this era of high production and transportation costs there is not a fair mar-gin of profit for the producing indus-try as a whole on 14%-cent copper, but if world demand continues to expand at the present rate and output is held at about the present level it is felt that a better price may be ex-pected for the metal.

Statistics are now available for the first quarter of the year. They show a slight reduction in the output of the refineries for the first three months of this year, a 22 per cent increase in our exports, somewhat smaller shipments to domestic manufacturers and a drop of 32,000,000 pounds in stocks of copper as compared with March 31 a year ago. points under liquidation and selling, inspired by the outlook for fair and warmer weather over the greater part of the South and relatively easy Liverpool cables.

May contracts sold off to 20.06 and October to 19.72 under these offerings, but there was trade buying and covering at the decline, and probably some fresh buying on private reports regarding delays to the crop and the necessity for replanting in some sections due to recent bad weather.

Prices rallied 4 or 5 points from the lowest, the market holding barely steady at the end of the first hour.

Private cables reported London and continental liquidation with a poor offtake in Liverpool, and that Egyptian cotton was depressed by general selling.

The cotton market was about 3 to 11 points net higher in mid-afternoon.

A large volume of early realizing and selling, inspired by reports of improving weather conditions in the South, was absorbed on declines of 10 or 12 points. Prices rallied later on covering of rebuying, prompted by numerous reports of damage to crop prospects due to recent storms.

CANADIAN BANK ISSUES REFLECT BUSINESS GAINS

Farm Implement Inquiries More Numerous-Spring Trade in Fair Volume

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR OTTAWA, April 24-Eagerness on the part of American syndicates to invest in sound Dominion securities is believed to have been responsible for a spectacular rise in Canadian bank stocks last week. On the Montreal and Toronto exchanges substantial gains were re-ported in pratcically all the leading bank stocks, but the most striking of all was the demonstration made by Royal Bank stock, which rose 52 points in one day, climbing as high as 440. The increase in this stock since the beginning of the month has been more than $70. The low point in 1927 was 344, or $96 a share less than last week's high quotation.

Canadian bank stocks have been advancing steadily for two years. To a certain extent it has been part of the general upward movement shown by all stocks of merit and promise, but specific influences have been working toward higher prices in the case of the Canadian banks. The popularity of these securities is attributed to the belief among investors generally that Canada is now embarked upon an era of expansion and prosperity and that banks, industrial companies and other well-managed concerns are bound to do well financially.

According to the latest reports spring trade is opening up in fairly satisfactory volume in all parts of the country, and prospects for material improvement with the progress of the season are cheerfully regarded. Wholesalers at some points report a well-maintained volume of orders being received for spring and summer requirements.

Farm Implement Inquiries

The Government's trade returns for the month of March, just issued, show that imports totaled more than $129,-000,000 and exceeded exports by more than $13,000,000. For the fiscal year ended March 31, however, exports were greater than imports by $140,-000,000. Total exports of Canadian produce for the year were $1,226,237,009 and of foreign produce $22,207,916, while total imports for the year were $1.108,821,649. For the last month or so, inquiries received by farm implement houses and others primarily interested in catering to the needs of farmers have been more numerous than in other years. Furthermore, the type of in-quiry is more promising, the majority of farmers being ready to pay cash for supplies, whereas in other the signing of notes was the usual

In the iron and steel industries, both or the fron and steel industries, both primary and allied, conditions at present are more promising than was the case at this time last year. Output of iron and steel in January and February was substantially higher than last year, while the returns for March show a further gain.

Production of steel ingots and castings in March at 118,258 tons was 20-per cent greater than that of February and 10 per cent better than March a year ago. For the first quarter of this year, production totaled 301,373 tons, an increase of 32 per cent over production during the corresponding period of last year.

Freight Movement Larger

Grain and grain products are play-ing an important part in the increased freight movement on Canadian rail-ways. The lateness of harvesting last .4866 year and the inability of shipp defore freeze-up has resulted in the carry-over of large quantities of grain into this year. The heavier shipment down. of forest products, ore, merchandise and miscellaneous goods have also continued to the improved showing.

Seeding operations are now general in the Prairie Provinces. From all areas come reports that the soil is in active, is moving in modern and soil leather, although active, is moving in modern and soil leather, although active, is moving in modern and soil leather.

During the month of March, production of news print in Canada amounted to 197,376 tons, with average production for the month being 80.3 per cent of capacity. This compares with production of 174,094 tons in March, 1927, when the mills operated at 86.2 per cent.

The Canadian bond market has shown little change. It is interesting to note that the market was entirely unaffected by the temporary increase in the call loan rate in New York to unaffected by the temporary increase in the call loan rate in New York to 6 per cent, and the feeling is growing that Canadian money rates are becoming less and less affected by conditions across the horder.

The price level of bonds has remained practically unaltered, and any changes have been in the direction of fractionally firmer prices for the first line securities.

Little Jane Ellen did not mind its grayness. She was so interested in the streets and shops and people that she forgot she had not had breakfast and was quite surprised when Mother turned into a restaurant in Lord Street. But it was great fun! There was music just as in the tea shop at Torquay, but no smiling girls in pretty aprons. Such a serious-faced man waited on them that Little Jane Ellen peeked at him from under her hat brim, too shy to speak. When he had gone she said. "But where's the big, big ship, Mummie?" "Aren't we having the greatest fun?" she inquired later as she spied the masts and funnels of shipping riding on the River Mersey. The taxi ran up a slope into a covered road-way. A big policeman stepped forth and held up his hand. The driver stopped. The big policeman thrust his head in through the window. "Tickets, madam," he said severely. Little Jane Ellen's heart stood still. "Oh.

Japan and China

TOT the least significant aspect of the Nanking affair of the spring of 1927 was the fact that, when British and American gunboats laid a land barrage around Socony Hill for the protection of foreign residents, the Japanese refused to participate in the bombardment. Such a policy of noninterference, according to many observers, was new for Japan, particularly when Japanese property and nationals were in peril. There was a storm of protest in Japan and among Japanese resident in China. But Baron Shidehara, at that time Foreign Minister, refused to be swayed from the strictest adherence to a "hands-off" policy. Later he explained to a correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor that "we have learned our lesson in China. Noninterference is just common sense and good business.

When, in April of last year the Wakatsuki Ministry fell and Baron Giichi Tanaka, head of the Seiyukai Party, came into power it was confidently stated that a "strong arm" policy would be initiated toward China. But nothing of the sort happened. Baron Tanaka followed, somewhat scrupulously, the program of his predecessor. At one time additional troops were landed in Shantung Province, but these, after a short period, were withdrawn. Sino-Japanese relations continued upon a basis more friendly than for several years preceding the present revolutionary movement.

Now, however, news dispatches indicate that there are changes taking place in the relations of the two powers. On the one hand, the Japanese, against the impending spring drive, have landed additional marines at Tsingtao. Further troops may be dispatched into Shantung Province if the nationalist threat from the south materializes. On the other hand, the Japanese are reported to be in negotiation with Gen. Feng Yu-hsien for a transfer to him of the authority in Manchuria now reposed in the war lord Chang Tso-lin.

The first step can be regarded as inevitable. The Japanese are not prepared to surrender their hold upon Shantung Province. With nationalist troops advancing toward Peking an additional garrison will unquestionably be sent to Tsinanfu and Tsingtao.

The second development, however, is of greater significance. The power of Chang Tsolin, dictator of Peking and Manchuria, is said to be wavering. Excessive taxation and widespread measures of oppression have stirred the people of this territory against him. Now, with the troops of Chiang Kai-shek pressing forward from the south and those of Feng Yu-hsien on the move from the west, the fall of Peking to the nationalists is not at all unlikely.

Japan, in such an event, proposes to guard her Manchurian interests. Feng, now allied with Chiang Kai-shek in the nationalist cause, seems to be the most likely individual to succeed Chang Tso-lin in the territory beyond the Great. Wall. What guarantees he can or will offer to Japan, in return for the aid of the Japanese, is another matter. Meanwhile, with these new developments, China may once again forge her way to the front pages of the American press. But it is safe to forecast only two things relative to the Chinese situation: first, that something is likely to happen; and, secondly, that whatever happens may be unexpected.

Profitable Public Expenditures

TRACES of provincialism that obtains in various regions of the United States are apparent in editorial demands of newspapers in great eastern cities that in the event of the Mississippi River flood-prevention bill passed by the Senate being accepted by the House, the President should veto it, on the ground that it will involve the ultimate appropriation of more than $1,000,000,000. This estimate is largely conjectural, but it is sufficiently startling to prompt objections to the flood-prevention program, that may have the effect of delaying action by the Congress to make possible the immediate undertaking of the work of levee reconstruction.

Among the reasons given for favoring a presidential veto, it is somewhat surprising to find the ancient objection that the money appropriated for protecting great fertile acres against floods will be permanently "locked up," since the completed levees will pay no direct dividends. It is also contended that the vast outlay contemplated will necessarily increase the burden of the taxpayers, and will tend to make it increasingly difficult to float loans for other public purposes. Sentiment in the United States is so wholly favorable to the immediate adoption of comprehensive plans for flood control that it is hardly possible that these protests will delay prompt action in this important matter. As for the objection based on alleged "locking up" of money, it would be superfluous to point out that practically all the money expended will go to pay the wages of labor, or for materials used. This money is in no sense withheld from circulation, but, on the contrary, in so far as many workers now idle will be employed directly in construction work or in the production of materials, it will go at once into the shopkeepers' tills, and through the usual channels of trade find its way back to productive industry.

The fact that the completed system will pay no dividends by no means justifies its classification as an unprofitable enterprise. In the protection given to many millions of acres of fertile lands, the increased prosperity and purchasing power of the areas affected will indirectly benefit the people of the United States as a whole.

Dwight Morrow for Nicaragua

ESPONDING to a resolution of the United N States Senate, Secretary Wilbur has reported to that body that the cost of the maintenance of the marines in Nicaragua since the signature of the Stimson Agreement in May of 1927 has been $1,607,290. During the operations in this Central American state, Mr. Wilbur reports that twenty-one marines have perished or have succumbed to injuries and forty-five have been wounded. He estimates the number of Nicaraguans whose lives have been sacrificed at 202. This estimate is, of course, merely approximate, and cannot be accepted as absolutely accurate.

There can be no doubt that the Coolidge Administration is embarrassed by this unhappy situation. It may be suggested, however, that a way is at hand to correct it. The notable success of Ambassador Morrow in Mexico, the skill with which he has adapted himself and his issues to the Mexican nature, the astuteness with which he has avoided complications and smoothed out seeming obstacles, suggests that he might well be intrusted with undertaking the pacification of Nicaragua. He has the entire confidence of the people of the United States and of Latin America as well. The mere fact that he had been intrusted by the Administration with the task of investigating the situation in Nicaragua would at once be hailed south of the Rio Grande as an evidence of the earnest desire of the United States to correct a condition which seems to be getting out of hand.

It might be that under his leadership Latin-American countries should be encouraged to offer their good offices. This would be a very fitting sequel to the recent Pan-American Conference at Havana at which Ex-Secretary Hughes did so much to harmonize the relations existing between the United States and Central and South American nations. But whatever the ultimate method to be adopted, the mere appointment of Mr. Morrow as a special envoy would at once inspire confidence, and reawaken friendship among those Latin-American peoples who now look with some doubt on the attitude of the United States toward one of their sister governments.

Diplomacy at Geneva

THE great advantage of the quarterly meet-, ings of the Council of the League of Nations at Geneva is found in the fact that not only does it afford an opportunity for the exchange of ideas between the ministers of different governments, which is of immense help in removing international difficulties, but also it obliges the great powers to bring their foreign policies to the bar of public opinion to a greater extent than has ever been possible before. The keen eves of the press follow the foreign ministers to the inner recesses of their hotels, where they carry on their secret conclaves, and nothing can be discussed the subject of which is not disclosed. Thus secret diplomacy in the old sense of the word can no longer be used as a cloak for the designs of one nation against another.

It is no chance which has compelled the Council to devote so much time to settling disputes between Hungary and her neighbors, or to adjusting differences between Poland and her eighbors, Lithuania, Danzig and Germany. All these questions are the signs of deeper currents of unrest and discontent in these particular regions, and if the methods of pre-war diplomacy prevailed, any one of them might become the cause of a conflagration involving all Europe. But under the new method, instead of an exchange of notes, which so often adds to misunderstanding and bitterness, the personal factor is called into play and differences which would have formerly seemed impossible of settlement gradually become susceptible to reason in the daily and friendly intercourse which is established between the representatives of the governments at Geneva.

All this is well known, but it needs to be insisted on at the present time, when it is the fashion to speak in slighting terms of the apparent failure of the Council to bring quarrelsome countries into line. Immediate success in the settlement of disputes is far less important than the educating effect of the discussions which take place. For not only do they focus public opinion on the danger spots of Europe, but the diplomacy as practiced at Geneva is continually teaching those who are engaged in it the important lesson of the essential unity of the interests of Europe.

Fixing Primary Election Costs

As TO the desirability of effectively checking the abuses which mark primary election campaigns there is no doubt. Strangely enough, there still exists some doubt as to the necessity of extending to Congress the specific power to enact laws designed to correct practices admittedly harmful and subversive. Unfortunately, as it appears, the dictum of the United States Supreme Court in the case wherein the status of Senator Newberry of Michigan was considered does not definitely settle a controverted point. Despite the somewhat conclusive language used by the court, opinions differ as to its actual import. Some insist that the existing Corrupt Practices Act contemplates the regulation of all pre-election expenditures by or in behalf of candidates for federal offices. Others contend that it cannot be construed as applying to the primary campaigns of candidates for the United States Senate, obviously because of the fact that at the time the act was passed the method of choosing senators by vote of state legislative assemblies, rather than by popular vote, was still in vogue.

That all uncertainty may in the future be avoided, it is now proposed by Representativeat-Large Rathbone of Illinois that a constitutional amendment be adopted which will confer upon Congress the power to regulate and limit contributions made to and for candidates and expenditures by and for candidates for party nominations for all elective federal offices.

It will be noted, of course, that although Mr.

Rathbone's proposal is urged chiefly to prevent such alleged abuses as were disclosed in the Newberry case, and later in the Smith campaign in Illinois and the Vare case in Pennsylvania, the amendment would, in fact, empower Congress similarly to limit the amounts which might be used in behalf of presidential and vicepresidential candidates. Recent disclosures have shown how great the temptation has been to conceal from the public both the source and amount of funds expended by national campaign managers before as well as after the nominating conventions.

The expenditure of millions of dollars in an effort to influence votes or otherwise to assure in advance the results of federal and state elections is an affront to the American voter, individually and collectively. It is a menace to the institutions which the voter is in duty bound to protect and safeguard. Thus recognized, it is not to be wondered at that the people insist that laws should be passed which will protect them from this particular form of debauchery and corruption. Left to the freedom of choice which is theirs by right, they will render just and sane decisions. The service is a gratuitous one for which no subsidy, no matter in what form, is asked.

A "Let's-Be-Sensible" Week Next!

WHEN various movements in the United States have taken over all of the fifty-two weeks in the year, the "saturation point" will have been reached. What will happen then? Will a "waiting list" be established, or will Congress be called upon to so reorganize the calendar as to let in a few more? An interesting situation apparently is on the way.

At the present time there is a very comfortable list of special "weeks" with a wide range of objectives. Though traces of commercialism may be detected in some of them, the majority undoubtedly are designed for the benefit and betterment of the people. Even a week for encouragement of a greater consumption of apple pies is not without some merit.

But the fact remains that there is a limited supply of weeks in a year and the demand for them appears to be steadily increasing. No sooner is a movement started than a week must be set aside for its development. There are now three classes of special weeks, national, state and municipal. So far as known, individuals have not adopted the plan of specializing in this manner, though there might be advantages in such ideas as "I'll-keep-smiling week," "I'llspeak-no-cross-words week," "I'll-pay-all-mybills week," and others of a similar nature.

In the meantime Congress and the state legislatures might appoint commissions to make a study of the limited supply of weeks and recommend plans not only for the conservation of the few that are left, but also for increasing the supply, a problem that appears to offer some rather obstinate difficulties.

Sports and Labor

MOVEMENT in which labor and sports A promise to develop a close alliance to their mutual advantage and which bids fair to broaden out into a program that may become of international importance has recently been started in New York City.

There is nothing new in the idea of business and sports mixing for the good of both as some of the finest athletic organizations in existence today are encouraged and backed by commercial organizations. Moreover, many business organizations are now and have been for years represented by sport teams, and invariably there has been a much closer bond between the employers and employees in such organizations than is the case with concerns which have paid little or no attention to the pleasure and welfare of those who work for it. The first definite step toward this bringing together of labor and sport is to take place in New York City next Labor Day. It is not expected that the usual Labor Day parades will be given up this year; rather athletic events will also be held on that day in which the members of the various labor organizations will compete. Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor and also president of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood, is among those interested in the plan, and committees are now working out the details.

From present indications it may be only a short time before such games are held in all parts of the United States, with the best of the athletes later coming together and playing in international competitions with athletes from other nations, just as was done by soccer football teams representing Worcester, Mass., and Worcestershire, Eng. In fact, this new plan seems to be a development of that soccer program which met with such splendid success and. if handled properly, this enlarged program should not only furnish some interesting competition to the members of the various labor unions, but also do much toward bringing Capital and Labor into a more friendly relationship than has yet been developed.

This is but another step toward the complete enforcement of prohibition in America.

To build a town to house a group of people for one night only would seem a strange proceeding. Yet that is just what Commander Byrd is planning to do at the Ross ice barrier in the antarctic. It might be well to remember, however, that in that region the nights are six months long.

In Modern Bagdad

AS WE drove down New Street and came to a halt before one of the three European hotels around which center the activities of modern Bagdad, the first thing to engage our attention was the clamorous sign of a well-known tourist agency. However, we did not permit that to discourage or even to disturb us. This might be modern Bagdad, but surely just around the corner, more or less, there must remain something of the ancient, even if nothing of the city of Haroun el Raschid. And, as I shall disclose presently, that turned out to be distinctly the case.

European hotels came to Bagdad, of course, coincidently with the arrival of the English. There were none before, any more than there were streets or shops or the amazing Maude Bridge. But the English, as is their way, have modernized only such part of Bagdad as is necessary to a reasonable degree of English comfort, and incidentally to the well-being of the natives themselves. The rest they have left untouched.

A moment from the broad, well-metaled way known as New Street and one is among the narrow, twisting alleys of the ages-old city, with the bazaars, unaltered as those of Canton or Fez, close at hand, and the activities of one of the most remarkable cities in the world going on as they have gone on since the days when the caravans from China passed here across the Tigris and continued toward

I have called the hotels European, but really they are that only in food and service. Each was once the palace of a sultan or at least of a wealthy merchant. The tiled patios have been roofed over to form the lounges, but the curiously carved wooden bow windows are the same and so are the floors of broad, rough stone slabs, the stone stairways, the galleries upon which the chambers open and the terraces overlooking the turgid Tigris.

There are outer courtyards in which grow tall royal palms, orange trees and many flowers, quite as in the days of the Caliphs. And at night, as the eastern moon rises over the ancient river, gleaming upon mosque and minaret and terrace, Bagdad is the city of the Arabian Nights once more, easily produced in fancy with never a

The day will come, no doubt, when Bagdad will be a tourist center; but that day is not yet, for visitors from the world are thus far comparatively few. And so even modern Bagdad ranks with Fez and Canton, among cities that are readily reached, as the most interesting in the world. Its people are the simple, friendly, agreeable folk of a place which has had little contact with what we call civilization.

As we walk about through the narrow ways and among the bazaars we are never once urged to buy or besought for "bakshish." That in itself, in the Near East, is enough to impress us favorably at the outset. If, as is the habit some of us, we wander by night through the native quarters, we soon find that a native policeman, Arabgarbed and with a rifle slung across his shoulder, is following us at a respectful distance, not because there is the least need, but merely because it affords him a great deal of satisfaction to think that he is a sort of honorary guard to the white stranger.

The owners of the little shops at every turning, squatted under a smoky kerosene lamp, give us friendly greeting, possibly even offer us a little refreshment. The narrow ways are dimly lighted and tortuous. In such a maze we may, not improbably, become uncertain of the exact whereabouts of that comparatively modern part of Bagdad which we have left behind, as it seems, thousands of miles and centuries of time. But it does not matter. Let us but wander on and on and presently we shall be back in New Street before we know it, or care.

that of the Arabian Nights, and that the visitor will disappointed if he anticipates anything of this sort. I do not know that I am altogether clear just what the city of the Arabian Nights was like, except in certain respects. It is true, of course, that the British have made various changes, as they do everywhere, and very much to their credit that is. But I doubt if Bagdad, once you get into the older parts and the bazaars, was more interesting at I rable in its history and associations.

any time than it is today. I am certain, indeed, that the greater part of it always looked the same as today.

In the narrow streets, with their canopies, the tiny shops, the little cafés with their Arab patrons squatted about, the laden donkeys, the occasional horseman, the camels, and the blend of every Near Eastern race, alle these have nothing of the present about them, any more than they have in Fez or in Amritsar. They are of the past, and although they are all familiar enough if you are a world traveler, if such as Bagdad is your first sight of the real East as distinguished from the sham East of Cairo or Algiers, you are certain to exclaim, "This is indeed the Bagdad of my dreams!"

But let us wander without stint of time or haste of pace through the bazaars of Bagdad. I sometimes wonder just what that word "bazaar" conveys to the average person. Does it mean the fairy treasure places of Kyoto, the seductive shops of Shanghai, the obsequiously attended marts of Calcutta, the incense-laden salesrooms of Cairo? It is properly applied to none of those.

A bazaar is really a small combination work and sales place. It may, like those of Damascus, be filled chiefly with European goods for sale to the folk of the place. Or it may, like the Jewish workshops of Bagdad, be a place where silver ornaments are made for the ankles of the women of Kurdistan or for the wrists of the Bedouin maidens of the Arabian desert.

And this, mark you, is one of the two most interesting places in Bagdad. Of a surety here is something that is unaltered since the forbears of these same Jews made these same silver ornaments in the shops of Babylon. The workmanship is of the same rough but unique and appealing sort, the bracelets of pounded silver, the anklets and the earrings and the nose rings, all as dear to an adornmentloving people as they were 5000 years ago. And here are the little bazaars, a score of them in bits of recesses in the walls surrounding an ancient square, a part of Bagdad you will never find unless guided to it, but a part you must not miss.

No one will importune you to buy, but if you do elect to purchase there will be none of the customary Oriental attempts at extortion. Four or five rupees will conclude an excellent bargain. But if your taste, and means, run to gold, why, then, at the shops of the goldsmiths, whose metal is pure and heavy, the dealing will have to be on another scale altogether. But here, too, the price will be stated. If it be too much there is an end to the matter. Gold is gold, in Bagdad as in London or Paris or New York. It is not a thing to be bargained over. But there are bits here which might grace the households of sultans.

+ + + We come presently to a mart of quite another, and much humbler sort, the famous bazaars of the Bagdad coppersmiths. To it we need little guiding, for its music is heard afar. I say "music" advisedly, for there is music of a primitive and elemental sort here.

We agree, as we stand watching and listening, that here is substance for a symphony, a symphony of ancient habits and days. It is a strange, canopied place, with the shops of fifty coppersmiths clustered about, their tiny forges alight behind them, fanned by the mere opening and closing of a valise-like contrivance. Each workman shapes pan, pot, tray or vase with no more heed to his neighbors, or to occasional European visitors, then the ivory worker of Canton. He has his task and he carries on at it with the attention to detail that alone insures worthy production.

The place is a true hive of industry, and as objects of every shape and size are modeled, there is a ringing clatter in many tones that blend into something not altogether apart from music. From it we feel that someone ought to produce a "Song of the Bagdad Coppersmiths. The substance is there, and surely the inspiration.

Thus the Bagdad that I have called "modern." I am

It has been suggested that the Bagdad of today is not not sure the word is well advised, for there is really comparatively little of the city by the Tigris that is modern. But after all, I was thinking of time rather than of character. This that I have attempted to describe is the Bagdad of today, but the greater part of it is, in effect, the Bagdad of yesterday, fascinating in its varied activities, agreeable in the characteristics of its people, memo-

Notes From Buenos Aires

THE forthcoming presidential elections, which take place every four years, fling as it were a feeling of excitement over the city. All the hoardings are placarded with posters in which "personalistas" and "antipersonalistas" point out their own excellent virtues and the utter worthlessness of those of their rivals. These posters make amusing reading and, since humor is not absent, they serve to liven up the streets of Buenos Aires, adding their silent clamor to the vociferations of the corner politicians who assault the ears of all and sundry with choice invective and high-flown patriotic sentiment in favor of one of the factions contending for supremacy

 *  The Steamship Conte Biancamano, the magnificent liner of the Lloyd Sabaudo, arrived recently in the port of Buenos Aires. The steamer made a record run between Rio Janeiro and Buenos Aires, taking about fifty-eight hours for the trip, the passage from Genoa being made in eleven days at an average of twenty miles an hour. Among the passengers were several distinguished visitors to Argentina, including General Belloni, Professor Zambrini, Señor Daniel Ortiz Basualdo, Count Augusto del Bono and others.

The new motorship Iguazú was added a short while ago to the fleet of the Mihanovich Argentine Navigation Company. This ship will be used on the Alto Paraná, having been specially constructed in order to navigate success fully a river noted for its shoals and cross currents. On the way out the Iguazu encountered bad weather, which damaged her to the extent that she had to spend two months in dry dock!

On May 25 the official opera season opens at the Colón Theater. The box office is already open for those who desire season tickets, and the program of this year's performances has been already published in the local press. Several new operas will be put on, these including "Fray Gherardo," by Pizzetti; "Goyescas," by Granados "Frenos," by Espoile, an Argentine composer, and Mozart's "Le Mariage de Figaro," which has not been sung in Buenos Aires for quite some time. 4 4 4

The Washington Department of Commerce recently announced that Argentina has regained her prewar status of leading in the South American markets for American leather. Her purchases last year amounted to a total of $985,152, an increase of more than $100,000 over the previous year.

The Club of Child Gardeners recently organized a competition open to all children, in order that they might demonstrate their knowledge of gardening, and compete for the valuable prizes presented by the various horticultural establishments in Buenos Aires. The competition took the form of a grand field day on the grounds of the club at Varela, the young competitors working at the various branches of their hobby from nine in the morning till five in the afternoon. The grounds at Varela are carefully divided into small plots, where are to be found flower beds, vegetable gardens, orchards and glass houses, the whole being kept in perfect order and neatness. There are, too, beehives, poultry inclosures and pigpens for those young members who prefer the raising of live stock to agriculture. This club, together with similar institutions

The Argentine tennis team left not long since for the Old World where they will take part in the matches for the Davis Cup. Edwin French, president of the Argentine Lawn Tennis Association, accompanied the team as delegate. The Argentine players are G. Robson, R. Boyd, C. Morea, A. Zappa, and H. Cattaruzza.

The municipality of Buenos Aires has presented to the city council a plan for the provision of five new public wash houses, including hot and cold water baths for men. women and children. Each of these wash houses will cost $100,000 paper to install, and they will be placed in the working-class districts of the city. Even though these wash houses are provided, complaints are made that they are rarely used by the people to whom semicompulsory hygiene does not appeal.

This morning's North Chinese News (March 15) reproduces in full from your columns an article about Bradford Washburn climbing Mt. Washington with G. P. Putnam of New York. I have just sent the article to the impetuous and intrepld lad-Your correspondents are among the first to seek us out.

One Side of Motion Picture Influences TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

At a chautauqua I attended some months ago in Idaho. man who had been in the theatrical business for nearly thirty years said in a lecture that the head detective in a sent to the reform school, stated that nearly all of them in describing the primary cause of their offense said it was what they saw at the picture shows. Ever since then I have been greatly impressed with the importance of all citizens uniting in an effort to do something or to see what could be done to improve matters. Louis Hyps. High Point, N. C.

"Amment I?" Used in Ulster

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: In a recent issue of the Monitor was a letter from M. A. C., London, Eng., suggesting the use of the phrase "Amment I?" instead of the much-talked of "Aren't I?"
M. A. C. wonders if "Amment I?" is in common use in Scotland, and this question I cannot answer but know that we, as children, always used it in Ulster.

I agree with M. A. C. that "Amment I?" is much softer, than "Aren't I?" and I might add that our mothers, in Ulster, usually found it a most persuasive expression.
